Robert Barr Smith

(1824 – 1915)

Robert Barr Smith

Robert Barr Smith (1824–1915), the son of a Scottish clergyman and his wife Marjory, née Barr, migrated to Melbourne in 1854. Moving to Adelaide just as Thomas Elder's brothers were leaving South Australia, he threw in his lot with Elder. He married Elder's sister Joanna in 1856 and, after profitably financing the developing copper mines at Wallaroo and Moonta on Yorke Peninsula, in 1863 he and Elder became sole partners in Elder, Smith & Co. Wealthy enough to engage in the capital-intensive fencing and bore-drilling required for successful dry-land pasturing, the company established vast pastoral holdings in central Australia and became one of the world's largest wool-sellers.

Barr Smith was also a director of the Adelaide Steamship Company and several insurance and utility companies, besides helping to found the Bank of Adelaide. These ventures brought great wealth, much of which Barr Smith used to support Adelaide's religious, cultural and educational institutions, notably the University of Adelaide on whose council he served for 19 years, and the Anglican church, where his £10,000 donation helped put the spires on St Peter's Cathedral and another £2000 sponsored the establishment of the diocese of Willochra. At his death, his fortune was the largest South Australia had seen and a further £40,000 was bequeathed to various charities.

Shortly before he died on 20th November 1915, Robert Barr Smith offered Torrens Park for use as a military hospital, fully furnished and equipped at his expense. Yet he refused a knighthood saying, 'I have done nothing to earn it, and the acceptance of it would be inconsistent with the spirit of my whole life.' He was buried, with his wife Joanna, in the Mitcham Anglican Cemetery.

Westfalia Scottish Butcher

Black pudding
Fruit Pudding

Pork Chipolatas
Haggis

Square Sauages
Gammon

Our haggis is available as a 2kg Chieftain for parties and ceremonial duties or a more humble 750g Clansman for family get togethers.

We are also very proud of our slicing haggis which is more suited for frying than our traditional haggis, so it is great for breakfasts or even between two bits of bread.

For something different from your friendly butcher, why not try our delicious homemade pies?? Our mouthwatering steak and scotch pies sell out fast every week so be sure to get in quick. Or simply give us a call and place your order to avoid disappointment
